Forensics team talks up a storm

By Tim Rohwer

UNO's forensics team has had busy weekends recently—winning many awards in the process.

On Oct. 5, three members of the team won awards at a forensics tournament at Creighton University, said Kris Carle, UNO director of forensics. Laura Penny won fifth place in the communication analysis, which is a study of famous speeches and political campaigns, and sixth place in informative speaking.

Phil Part took sixth place in the communication analysis for his analysis of Clarence Thomas' speech to the Senate committee. Craig Phemister took fourth place in the after-dinner humorous speaking category.

Thirty students from various colleges competed in the tournament, Carle said.

On the weekend of Sept. 20, UNO finished second out of 11 schools at a tournament at Eastern Illinois University, he said.

"We had 18 individual awards at that tournament. We were ready and a lot of schools weren't," Carle said.

On Oct. 6, the UNO team hosted their own tournament. Over 120 students from 17 universities attended. Carle said his team did fairly well, but Hastings College, Kansas State University and Texas Southern University were the top three schools.

Carle said 12 students compete on his team, double the number from last year's team.

The UNO team is not only well-versed in public speaking, they are also becoming experts in geography.

Carle said the team will attend 11 tournaments across the country this academic year, as well as the national tournament at the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

Carle said forensics tournaments involve 11 different events in three main categories: interpretation of drama and literature, prepared speaking, and limited preparation speaking, which includes impromptu speaking.

He said his team is not classified as a debate team. At least not yet.

"A debate team has two people who work together. Our members are involved in individual events. Hopefully, next spring we can have a debate team," Carle said.

Students involved in forensics gain many educational benefits, he said.

"The topics we debate concern real world issues," Carle said. "We discuss such controversial issues as the death penalty and gun control. You learn to do research on current topics and how to think on your feet. If you look at some of this country's leaders, you'll find a great number who had experience in forensics," Carle said.

Many of the forensics students are pre-law and political science majors, he said.

"You learn how complex public issues are," he said.

Carle said one disadvantage for the forensics team at UNO is the school offers only three limited scholarships. He said the top forensics schools, including Hastings College and Bradley University in Illinois, offer full-ride scholarships.

"Most of the students at those schools can work all summer long on forensics. Most of my students have to work at other jobs. It's difficult."

Parking tickets

Fines do not pay for officers

By Heidi Jeanne Hess

It is 10:05 a.m., and you are late to class. You can't find a parking place, so you park illegally.

When you get out of class, a $20 parking ticket from Campus Security is on your car. If you do not pay the fine within 14 days, you now owe $40.

Students who are paying parking fines may wonder where that money goes.

According to Charles Swank, manager of Campus Security, all revenue generated from parking fines and the sale of parking permits goes into a parking account.

"That account is used to pay for all of the parking costs," Swank said.

These costs include buying the rules and regulations books for parking, parking stickers, permits and maintenance of the parking lots.

"It does not pay for any security staff," he said.

Money from the parking account is also used to pay a bond issue from 1986, a portion of which was used to build the parking lots on the west end of campus, Swank said.

One complaint frequently heard by students is the apparent overselling of parking permits.

Swank said the term "overselling" is not accurate.

Since not all students with parking permits are on campus at the same time, if Campus Security sold only as many permits as there are stalls, Swank said, "Probably 60 percent of the parking spaces would be empty at peak times. As it is, two and three people end up using one stall each day."

Swank said no one at UNO should be getting stressed about parking on campus since they can park at Ak-Sar-Ben and use the shuttle bus.

"If anyone is feeling stressed out about parking, they are subjecting themselves to something they don't need to," he said. "I don't understand anyone subjecting themselves to the stress of parking by coming an hour early and hoping for a stall (on campus)."

Swank added the majority of a Campus Security officer's time is not spent ticketing cars.

"If there is another call, ticketing does not take preference."

Bouncing for fun and money

UNO student Ted Schroeder helped raise money for Easter Seals by participating in the Bounce-a-thon. The event, sponsored by Chi Omega sorority and Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, started last Friday at 7 a.m. and ended Saturday 7 a.m. More than $3,500 was raised.

Two from UNO serve United Way

By Christine Johnson

Jennifer Forbes-Baily, a UNO academic advisor, and Shara Goff, a UNO student, spend much of their spare time comforting people with serious illnesses.

Because of their efforts, they have been chosen as posterpeople for the 1991 United Way/CHAD campaign.

Their words of advice and encouragement come from first-hand experiences.

On Aug. 1, 1986, at the age of 37, Forbes-

Baily was diagnosed as having breast cancer. The disease was in a late stage, requiring immediate surgery, and a modified radical mastectomy was performed.

After the surgery, Gillian Piennett visited Forbes-Baily. Piennett was involved with a program called "Reach to Recovery", and had also had a mastectomy when she was 28 years old.

"She was a warm, vibrant, active woman—living proof that cancer can be beaten," Forbes-Baily said.

Forbes-Baily's cancer is in remission, but she said she is still a high-risk candidate for a recurrence. A volunteer for the "Reach to Recovery" program, she now helps others, as Piennett helped her.

"Gillian knew exactly what I was feeling and thinking because she had lived it," Forbes-Baily said. "She gave me hope."

Goff, an interior design major, was diagnosed when she was 8 years old as having

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

El Alamo not Tex-Mex food

Dear Editor:

This is a letter in response to labeling the restaurant El Alamo as "Tex-Mex" in the Sept. 27 Gateway.

El Alamo is not a Tex-Mex restaurant since it uses authentic ingredients and recipes, without altering them by adding or substituting American ingredients.

For those who are misinformed, Tex-Mex is a fusion of American and Mexican cuisine.

If you are hungry for authentic Mexican food, dine at El Alamo, but if you are hungry for Tex-Mex go to Chi-Chi's, Señor Matias, Romco's or Julio's. Where else would one find an enchilada covered with American cheese?

Is the labeling of El Alamo as Tex-Mex an innocent mistake, or does it represent the restaurant critic's ethnocentric attitude?

Eric Stroes

UNO Graduate Student

Editor's Note: The reference to El Alamo as Tex-Mex was an innocent mistake and not a statement of ethnocentricity.

Pepsi referendum debunked

Dear Editor:

It appears we will not have a Pepsi referendum after all.

Several student senators on the budget committee managed to table it indefinitely. Because it had not been introduced in written form, it was not brought before the full senate for a vote.

I have submitted my proposal in written form to the student affairs committee, but they are not scheduled to meet until after the election.

So, there you have it. Student Government in action. Or Student Government inaction.

The interesting thing to me is the people who are trying to take the hyphen away from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln are telling me soft drinks are not important.

But do you suppose when 96 percent of students are not voting, the importance of Student Government itself has been brought very much into question?

Stephen Srb

UNO Student Senator

Hey — don't insult my dog

Dear Editor:

I am really hurt. Eric Ettinger did one thing when he insulted me, but he went too far when he insulted my dog (Oct. 4, Gateway).

I love my dog. I happen to believe any dog that can sneeze on command and open the zipper of a backpack to get at a candy bar is more than "worthy" to read the Constitution of the United States.

While the legislature may be "better equipped" theoretically to shape the judiciary according to Ettinger, the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee certainly aren't morally equipped to handle their own affairs, let alone to recommend a justice.

In defense of my dog, he never bounced a check, had anything to do with Charles Keating and has never driven a female dog off a bridge and let her drown.

It must seem obvious, then, that my dog would be far more "worthy" to pass judgement on potential justices than the likes of Sens. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.), Joseph Biden (D-Del.) and Alan Cranston (D-Calif.).

I would appreciate in the future you keep your elitist attacks directed towards me and not my dog.

What about Marlin Briscoe?

Dear Editor:

Just a minor quibble in what was a most enjoyable story on the "75 years of UNO football" (Oct. 4, Gateway).

It would have been nice to see a picture and accompanying story on Marlin Briscoe.

Mr. Briscoe was the quarterback for the University of Omaha team in the late 1960s and later became the first black professional quarterback in the old American Football League.

Watching "Marlin the Magician" play was wondrous.

I am sure he served as an inspiration to many in the Omaha community.

OPINION / EDITORIAL

Women — back to your battle stations

Which is a greater sacrifice to Anita Hill — to allow Clarence Thomas to judge American life for 50 years or to allow her own life to swirl down the drain?

She and Thomas have calculators in hand and statements coming out of their ears.

They are both the sacrificial lambs offered to the gods of special interest groups.

It's about time. Bleeding-heart liberals have been broiled well-done and served on a silver platter to the conserva-tyrants far too long.

When is the American public going to expose the cover-up tactics of politicians?

How long do women have to ask to be treated like human beings? Women have asked, then demanded, but American society continues to muffle their screams, blaming it on PMS. Not anymore. Women are on the front pages, and now they're watching their abusers squirm.

However, the sacrificial lambs are a black man and a black woman, hashing it out for a committee of 14 white men to judge. Male senators admit they cannot personally understand sexual harassment. If they can't understand, how can they judge?

ON THE 8TH DAY WITH TARA MUIR

Why is Thomas innocent until proven guilty but Hill is guilty of lying until proven otherwise? The double standard is alive and well in 1991.

If a tenured law professor isn't a credible witness for sexual harassment, who is? A nun? The conserva-tyrants would find some choir boy who had a juicy story to tell ...

Rage roars through me when Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) reads from "The Exorcist" or past sexual harassment cases. Did it ever occur to him that maybe the materials he accuses Hill of using to fabricate her story could be the same materials that Thomas used to harass her?

Not only is Hill lying, according to you know who, she is incapable of thinking for herself. What better defense for politicians than to smear their opponent? This is enough to call women to your battle stations ... again.

Thomas' credibility was shot when he claimed he had no opinion on a woman's fundamental right to privacy. He lowered his credibility further when he didn't even listen to Hill's testimony on Friday.

Office politics are a fact of life. But intertwine these politics with who's sleeping with whom and you've got one hell of a confused rat race. Leave sex for social gatherings and bedrooms, not the board room.

How do I know, you ask? Because while I lived and worked in the furniture business in Miami, Fla., from 1984 to 1989, I was subjected to a boss who thought kissing me was a reward for sales. After I told his pucker to take a hike, he never harassed me again and was responsible for several great promotions and raises.

But later I was subjected to the insults of a new boss who told 20 men during a meeting that he and I had taken pictures of ourselves as we fooled around while working late the night before. There was no fooling around. I confronted him and politely asked if he would leave me out of his obnoxious jokes. He laughed in my face.

He fired or forced to resign four women managers, replacing them with men. My own job had been reduced to buying his specialty coffee beans instead of furniture inventory.

He referred to the company's typical customer as a "standard brain-dead woman." Not only did I have to contend with his daily compliments on how well my baggy clothes fit, but I had to contend with outright slander against my gender. Enough was enough. I quit the job and then joined the National Organization for Women.

I used to think I had won when I found a better paying job. But I really lost. He was allowed to control my life because he was a man and I was a woman. That will not happen to me again.

If my two former bosses would be nominated to the Cartoon Hall of Fame, I would hesitate to come forward for two reasons. I would not want to relive it again, and more importantly, they are still great professional references for my work.

I understand Anita Hill's apathy for 10 years. If you don't, you must not be a woman that has worked in an office, or you are a blind conserva-tyrant follower (a disease that has reached epidemic proportions on the UNO campus).

Last week, Hill had one choice. She had to save American women from Clarence Thomas, who believes women are second class.

Regardless of the outcome, thank you, Anita Hill. You "man" your battle station well.

Judge Thomas and his dignity.

One of them is lying; who?

Clarence Thomas and Anita Hill have been trapped in the red tape of the American political process.

Senators on the Senate Judicial Committee have turned the confirmation hearings of Judge Thomas into a knock-'em-down, drag-'em-out political fight. And, in the process, Thomas and Hill have been dragged through the mud.

What is truly disappointing is the lack of a clear answer in this sexual harassment case. Consider:

A) Thomas did sexually harass Hill, and he is confirmed to the Supreme Court despite the fact.

If this is the case, what message does this extend to victims of sexual harassment?

It would be unfortunate to allow someone to formulate the laws he cannot abide by himself. If indeed Thomas did sexually harass Hill, he should not only be rejected for a seat on the Supreme Court, he should also relinquish his right to any future public service position.

Women cannot idly stand by and allow an issue like this to go unnoticed; so if Thomas is guilty of sexual harassment, we applaud Hill for coming forward.

B) Thomas did not sexually harass Hill and is not confirmed to the Supreme Court regardless of it.

If this is true, it leaves the doors wide open for anyone with a vengeance to ruin someone's life with one simple lie.

If this is nothing more than an extensive smear campaign to get someone else nominated, it will work—but at what expense?

A man's life.

If this is the case, we wish Thomas the best of luck in his pursuit of a position on the court.

This is where the system is flawed—no matter what happens, two lives have been ruined, two reputations smeared, two minds questioned for the purpose of politics.

Sadly, no matter how many character witnesses each side can drag out or how many character assassinations the other side can counterattack with, the United States Senate cannot possibly know what happened.

There are only two people who know the truth—Hill and Thomas.

One of them is lying. The other has had their life ruined.

Older and bolder students

The best thing about being a non-traditional student at a Midwest university is one's increased capacity to separate nonsense from common sense. I think some recent Gateway columns represent bovine boredom.

I'm sure I can offer greater insight to real UNO issues.

Let's first take a look at the Student Programming Organization's (SPO) valiant effort to change the homecoming king and queen election rules. It's hog heaven to endorse the philanthropic requirement. If SPO is going to do away with this traditional popularity contest, then it should simply limit candidacy to overweight or zit-encrusted students over 30.

I'm sure many adult students wouldn't mind having some of their endless student fees diverted from such things as homecoming; what we want are sliding scale payment plans for students using the UNO Child Care Center.

There is the big hierarchical push for dorm rooms, too, but aging baby boomers don't need 'em.

President Bush says education should be accessible to non-traditional students, but dormitories won't help UNO become user-friendly for us.

Successfully learning to please eccentric instructors transfers to knowing how to please persnickety supervisors in the work force.

The only eye-popper caused by an influx of non-traditional students to UNO involves something that may benefit everyone. Adults with practical hard-knocks knowledge don't take kindly to condescension from university staff. That means we expect those UNO clerks and professors who attended Cruella de Vil's human relations course to practice new, courteous treatment of students.

Well, corn-fed cronies, life after 25 still includes college, but I won't be studying at the Student Center.

Becky Moertl is a junior majoring in secondary education.

ANOTHER VIEW MATURITY

Bring on Mary Poppins for our kids at the right price, and we'll fill the classrooms with mid-career students who appreciate the opportunity to acquire "information age" skills.

Students age 25 and older make up slightly more than half of UNO's enrollment.

Then we have Gateway columnist Craig Siedlik, offering squalor over grade point averages and refusing to acknowledge one important payoff for studious cowpokes: They get scholarships.

UNO contributes to fund drive

polyarticular juvenile rheumatoid arthritis, an auto-immune disease involving chronic inflammation.

She said her doctors believe she may have had the disease since she was 15 months old.

This disease can be controlled by medication, but there is no cure.

"United Way/CHAD has done a lot for research. I've been on many different medications, and I've had severe side effects to almost all of them. Now, I've been on a new drug called Methotrexate for the past couple of years."

Research has shown Methotrexate may be given to patients as the first step, instead of making them go through all the different medications first, Goff said.

Today, Goff talks at many arthritis conventions trying to help others.

"All my life I've looked at things differently. The arthritis will never go away. I'll have it for the rest of my life, so what can you do except keep on living? You can't hide and bury yourself; you have to keep going," Goff said.

The United Way/CHAD fund-raising campaign in Omaha has already raised over $7 million, half of the $14.6 million goal, Forbes-Baily said.

"One out of four people will be helped by United Way/CHAD in some way," Forbes-Baily said.

In August, for the first time, UNO hosted the Kick Off Tryathlon to start off the United Way/CHAD fund-raising campaign, Goff said.

Also, two of UNO's faculty, Mary Lynn Reiser, program coordinator for business administration, and Robert Runyon, library director, are co-chairpeople of the fund drive at UNO. They identified a task force who selected 60 people to act as solicitors, Forbes-Baily said.

"What people don't realize is that United Way/CHAD has 53 different organizations," Forbes-Baily said.

These include organizations helping the homeless, Big Brothers, Big Sisters, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, the Chicano Awareness Center, and the Visiting Nurses Association.

"Chances are, you have been, or at least know someone who has been, helped by United Way/CHAD," Goff said.

Sobering fact: Alcohol awareness growing

(CPS) — The old image of an "Animal House" beer-swilling fraternity soiree doesn't make it with the new generation. Drunken behavior, say students, is definitely uncool.

This new attitude toward alcohol is showing up on American campuses during the 1991 National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week, Oct. 13-20. From booze-free nightclubs to "mocktail" parties, the message is clear: imbibing is OK — getting wasted is not.

"I believe it's because students are more health-conscious these days," said Kurt Bair, a senior counselor at Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa. Students are still drinking, but in less quantity than before.

A recent Roper survey showed more than half of all students (53 percent) consider alcohol abuse a major problem on campus. That was dramatically higher than student concern about non-violent and violent crime, drug abuse and AIDS.

In addition, a newly released University of Florida study claims the number of students who drink is less than it was a decade ago, and those who do are drinking less.

The study showed the percentage of student drinkers decreased from 89 percent in 1981 to 80 percent in 1991. Average consumption among drinkers also dropped from 40 drinks per month in 1981 to 34 drinks monthly in 1991.

"The study clearly shows that college student drinking patterns and knowledge about alcohol changed significantly during the decade of the '80s," said Dr. Gerardo Gonzalez, chairman of the department of counselor education.

While the figures appear encouraging, experts say one in 10 drinking students will develop a chemical dependency.

"It is still a major problem," Gonzalez said. "The majority of students drink, and campus incidents of violence and sexual assault are usually alcohol-related."

Approximately 430 million gallons of beverages are consumed annually by college students who spend about $4.2 billion on booze each year, according to the Public Health Service's Office for Substance Abuse Prevention.

In 1990, 33.5 percent of drivers in fatal crashes between the ages of 20 and 24 were intoxicated, a 6 percent drop since 1982, says the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Even when alcohol use doesn't become chemical dependency, college campuses must grapple with its effects, such as poor academic performance, aggression, property damages, accidents and strained relationships.

Experts say alcohol also plays a significant role in cases of date rape, a problem receiving increasing attention.

Many campuses now offer resident drug and alcohol counselors and some programs for those dealing with the devastating effects of alcohol dependency.

Mavericks fall to 3-3

Mankato State silences UNO offense

By Lance Braun

For the second week in a row, the UNO Mavericks' football team lost a homecoming game to a North Central Conference (NCC) foe.

After losing their own homecoming game to South Dakota State University a week ago, the UNO Mavs lost 17-0 at the Mankato State University Mavericks' homecoming last Saturday.

"I think we played well for most of the game," said Mav Defensive Coordinator Scott Grogan.

"We had some great individual efforts, and everyone played up to their abilities. Even though it was a loss, you still have to find some positives," Grogan said.

"I guess our positives would be that they had very good field position on several occasions in the first half, and we kept them out of the end zone for most of the half."

For the first time this season, UNO's defense surrendered points in the first quarter.

Mankato State drove 55 yards in 10 plays, and Mankato State running back Lance Dunn scored from 1 yard out to make the score 7-0 with 5:06 left in the first quarter.

Last season, Dunn was the quarterback for Mankato State as the Mankato State Mavericks beat UNO 23-3.

Mankato State's touchdown was the only score the UNO Mavs surrendered in the first half.

UNO safety Mark Mattingly and linebacker Craig Scorsa each had a fumble recovery and defensive back Rodney Bradley had two interceptions to thwart first-half Mankato State drives and keep the score 7-0 at halftime.

"Being down only 7-0 at halftime, we felt very good about things," Grogan said.

"We knew Mankato State was a very good team that had played close with several good teams. We knew our offense would make adjustments, but we didn't think we needed to make many defensive adjustments at that point."

The third quarter looked similar to the first half.

Mankato State continued to shut down the UNO offensive attack and used their powerful rushing game to wear down the Mav defense.

UNO's defense finally cracked late in the period.

Mankato State kicker Ken Navitsky hit a 41-yard field goal to highlight an 8-play, 39-yard drive, giving Mankato State a 10-0 lead with 1:27 remaining in the third quarter.

The UNO Maverick offense, dormant for most of the first three quarters, suddenly came to life.

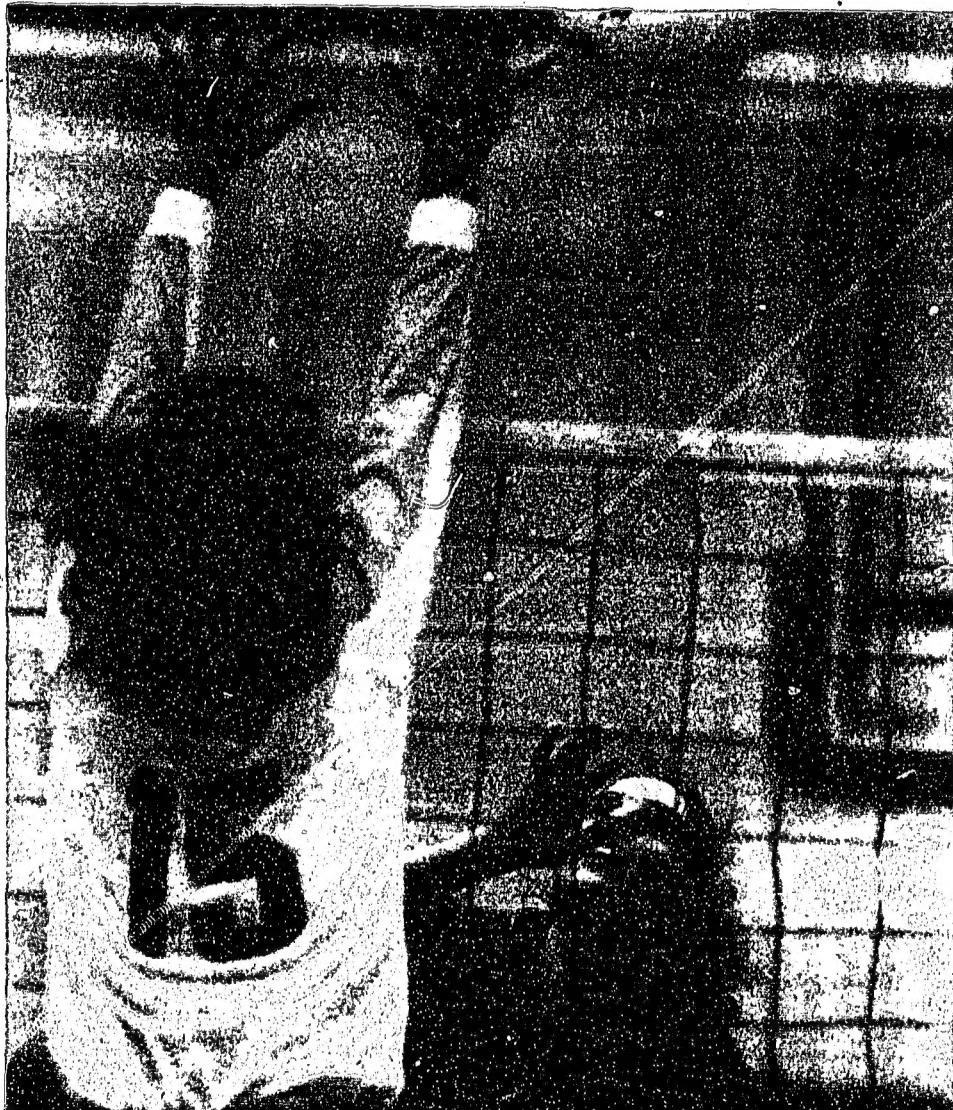

UNO quarterback Josh Lucidike, starting in place of the injured Paul Cech, connected with running back Abel Fernandez for 36 yards.

An illegal roughness penalty against Mankato State at the end of the play gave UNO the ball at the Mankato State 31-yard line.

Two plays later, Fernandez slashed through the Mankato defense for 13 yards and a first down at the Mankato State 18-yard line.

On the next play, Fernandez appeared ready to score on

Lady Mavs hit the highs and lows in conference play

By Elizabeth Merrill

Last weekend was filled with surprises for the Lady Maverick volleyball team.

The squad handily defeated Mankato State College on Friday and were stunned by 5-11 St. Cloud State College on Saturday.

"We didn't expect (St. Cloud State) to play so well," said UNO senior Pam Largen. "We didn't think that we would have to play that hard, and we made some mental mistakes."

The Lady Mavs led the Huskies 2-1 after the third game and it appeared they were headed towards another conference victory. St. Cloud State then stormed back, winning the final two games, 15-5 and 15-13.

UNO assistant coach Stephen Field said the team's lack of intensity was the key to the Mavericks' demise.

"We had a hard time playing at a high level for a long period of time," he said. "We kind of played up and down."

Although the Mavericks defeated Mankato State the night before, Field said the squad encountered a similar problem with momentum.

"We built up a big lead in all three games, let them come back, and then put them away," he said. "It's a bad cycle we get into."

"We didn't really feel good about the way that we played (against Mankato State)," Largen said. "We got the win, and we were really happy about that, but things just weren't happening for us. We didn't fix it and it got worse for us (against St. Cloud State)."

The conference split over the weekend evened the Lady Mav North Central Conference (NCC) record to 2-2.

"It's tough because every conference game is so important," said Field. "The teams are so close; there is so much parity in the conference."

UNO will face its toughest challenge in the latter part of the season, when they face three nationally-ranked teams — the University of North Dakota, North Dakota State University and the University of Northern Colorado.

"Our last three games are going to be the toughest, so it's important that we win as many games as possible in between," Field said.

The Lady Mavs will face the University of Nebraska at Kearney on Tuesday and then will travel to play the University of South Dakota on Friday. The next day, they will challenge NCC nemesis Morningside College. The game will mark the fourth meeting for the schools this season. UNO leads the series 2-1.

Although the Morningside game will be the focal point for the team this week, Largen insists that the squad must take the rest of the season one game at a time. "We've got to go into each conference match thinking that it is going to be a tough game, because they all have been so far."

is affecting all of us.

We are learning from the Japanese, Europeans, Africans and many other people. And they are learning from us, as well. The best parts of new cultures are being assimilated, and through that, we are becoming more alike than different.

Of course, it's not easy.

Bigotry, racism and ethnocentrism get in the way of the world becoming a global market and a global society.

Many people say sports aren't important.

But let me remind you, faithful readers, of this: World peace won't come from politicians announcing a new agreement between governments.

It will come from individuals, when we sit down with our brothers and sisters from other countries over a cup of sake to watch the Super Bowl.

U.S. sports add to global society

It's a new world out there.
A big one.

That's right, even in the sports world, the major sports are starting to look beyond the borders of the good ol' U.S.A. for new places to play.

Baseball has always been the most global of sports in its outlook.

Throughout Central America and the Caribbean, winter baseball is played, many times by major league players.

In Japan, baseball is a huge (pun intended).

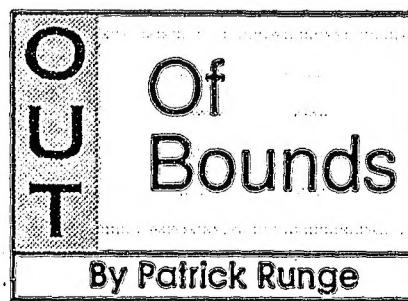

But, even more indicative, two teams in the major leagues of "America's pastime" — the Toronto Blue Jays and the Montreal Expos — aren't from the U.S.

Maybe, if the Blue Jays haven't been eliminated by the time this goes to print, we will truly have a World Series this year.

Hockey is the other major sport with a strong Canadian presence. Six teams — Toronto, Montreal, Calgary, Winnipeg, Vancouver and Quebec — in the National Hockey League are Canadian. Usually the Stanley Cup finals come down to at least one Canadian team in the finals.

And now football (or gridiron, as it's called in England) has hit the world scene.

Last year the World League of American Football had its debut season. It wasn't a huge hit — it won't play this year but will the next — but in the European cities (London, Barcelona and Frankfurt), it went over big.

The London Monarchs, the WLAF champs, would fill Wembley Stadium for home games.

Other sports are going global, too. Basketball has its Spanish leagues where NBA washouts can play.

Soccer has always been an international sport.

The Ryder Cup golf competition between the U.S. and Europe is more heated than ever.

And I'm not even considering the Olympic Games, the ultimate example of international sports.

What is the meaning of all this? Well, it's just another example of how much the world is shrinking, and how that globalization another long run, but was stripped of the football just short of the goal line.

Mankato defensive back John Kelling recovered the fumble in his own end zone for a touchback, killing the drive.

On the next play, Mankato State running back Jurrell Simmons broke the UNO Mavericks' backs with a 52-yard sprint to the UNO 28-yard line.

Eight plays later, Mankato backup quarterback Mike Kayser scored from 2 yards out, increasing Mankato State's lead to 17-0 with 11:18 left in the game.

The UNO Mavs got another scoring opportunity as linebacker Kirk Peterson recovered a fumble at the Mankato 23-yard line late in the game.

But three plays later, Lucetke threw his second interception of the game, and the UNO Mavericks never seriously threatened again.

Despite the setback, Grogan is confident with the defense at this point.

"I feel we're replaying pretty well right now."

There are always things we need to get better at, because we have five good teams yet to play.

"We've got to work on giving the offense as much field position as we can. This game, we played on our end of the field entirely too much."

With the loss, UNO falls to 3-3 overall, and 1-3 in the NCC.

The UNO Mavs play at home Saturday against 6-0 Northern Colorado, currently ranked third in NCAA Division II.
